Greetings from Phoenix,

It has long been thought that Al Qaeda and Osama Bin Laden were creations of the USA as instruments intended to further the foreign policy of the country to counteract the Soviet Union.

The United States considered militant Islamics as allies in the battle against soviet expansion in Afghanistan and other countries in the Middle East . The Reagan administration NSA director, General William Odom, has said "by any measure the U.S. has long used terrorism. Even the Muslim brotherhood was used by the CIA in Egypt in the 70s.

Much like Al Qaeda, the Islamic State (ISIS) were American-made instruments intended to divide and counter the growing influence of Iran in the region.

Unfortunately ISIS and Al Qaeda have become a thorn in the side of the United States though these groups were intended to bolster the foreign policy of the United States.

We truly are living in interesting times, not only here in the United States, but around the world. Troubles continue to mount up as future events will likely test the ability of the new American President to deal with a major crisis. Russian and China are pushing the edge of the envelope while rogue nations like North Korea and Iran continue to be a source of frustration for the western world.

Iran continues to boast its military prowess, and it is not a secret that they are developing not only nuclear weapons but the means to deliver warheads via the development of cruise missiles. This is cause for a great deal of consternation for its neighbors, chief among which is Saudi Arabia.

U.S. President Donald Trump is reported to be working to create a military alliance of Sunni Arab nations to combat the growing power and threat of Iran. The significance of this is the United States has been party to a string of organizations which have in the long run had unintended negative consequences.

In Daniel 11:40 it foretells an end-time conflict between the King of South and the King of the North. Is it possible that the United States will be responsible for bringing together what will ultimately become the King of the South?

Attached is the PT in Word and PDF.

Have a wonderful Sabbath!

Kind regards,
Jim Tuck
